

From The Library Of Marnie McNamara
www.primaryrelationship.com

Advice on Speed Dating

By George Wood

Speed dating is becoming increasingly popular these days. It's a process of finding dates quickly by getting introduced to a number of perspective partners and then deciding which one was the most compatible match. It can be a lot of fun, especially if the club organizing the event specializes in speed dating, but before going for your first speed dating event, you should consider some tips which will come handy once you're there.

Appearance counts a lot in speed dating, since you have only limited time available to get to know a person. Make sure you are looking attractive and at an ease with yourself. Be confident and never let negative feelings overcome your cheerful nature. First impressions are very important in speed dating.

Sense of humor is also very critical in any kind of dating. Bring some laughter to the date. Try to make some funny remarks and see your date's reaction to them. If they don't respond with pleasure they probably didn't like your jokes at all. If humor is important to you then move on, this person is not right for you.

People sometimes try too hard to impress the other person. This kind of behavior will only tell them that you are desperately trying to land a date. Don't tell them straight ahead that how nice you think they are. Let things flow in a natural manner and wait for an appropriate moment to reveal your feelings. Be yourself. Don't try to imitate a star or a celebrity by repeating some popular dialogues. Remember that the biggest mistake you would ever make on a first date is lying to your partner. Be honest about everything. If you deliberately try to improve your status by introducing some small lies, it's only going to earn you negative points on the spot and embarrassment in future.

Be positive and practical. Don't give up even if you were not satisfied with the partners you have had so far. Try to look at the bright side. There will be more and better chances than just landing a date which will not work out properly.

If speed dating has been organized by some online dating service, then don't consider your first meeting a date. This is a meeting to assess you partner to decide if you the two of you click. If things don't turn out the way you have planned, don't think that you are now bound to make it successful. Think about your priorities and needs and before making a decision consider your options carefully.

Finally, remember that speed dating is supposed to be fun. So don't try to make it look like as if you're meeting your boss. Try to act as relaxed as you can and give your partner an equal chance of getting to know your habits and your true self. Don't judge them quickly. Take sometime to ponder over the short time the two of you spent together and then decide.

DatingShare.com is 100% free dating site and matchmaking service for singles. Plus provides free dating forum with dating tips and advices.

Article Source: http://EzineArticles.com/?expert=George_Wood

For more articles and information, return to: <http://www.primaryrelationship.com/library.htm>
I help your primary relationship flourish so all of your relationships will blossom.